The Stem Cell Channel was created to inspire ongoing discussion, education and debate with all members of the public about stem cell research.

On the site you will find varied opinions and information from scientists, medical practitioners, patients, politicians, religious figures and mini documentaries.

The views and opinions of those expressed on the Stem Cell Channel have not been created or commissioned by the ASCC, do not necessarily represent the views of the ASCC, and they may not be used for advertising or product endorsement purposes.

The Stem Cell Channel may provide links to other internet sites only for the convenience of world wide web users. The Stem Cell Channel is not responsible for the availability or content of these external sites, nor does the Stem Cell Channel endorse, warrant or guarantee the products, services or information described or offered at these other Internet sites.

It is not the intention of the Stem Cell Channel to provide specific medical advice, but rather to provide users with information. No specific medical advice is provided on the website, and the Stem Cell Channel urges users to seek the services of qualified medical practitioners for any personal health concerns. Information obtained from the Stem Cell Channel web site is not intended to take the place of proper medical advice from a fully qualified health professional.
